A LASTING GIFT FOR THE FUTURE, WOVEN THROUGH ACTION AND COLLABORATION

Rotary International District 2750 2026-27 Governor Kidemasa Muto

A Lasting Gift for the Future, Woven Through Action and Collaboration

The Muto Rotary year has begun, and our first month has already passed.

At the Second District Executive Committee Meeting and Kickoff Party held on June 19, I was delighted to welcome many Past Governors and District leaders. It was a wonderful opportunity to share our enthusiasm for the new Rotary year. Seeing everyone's smiles and positive spirit strengthened my confidence that we will accomplish great things together throughout the year.

This year, I have chosen "A Lasting Gift for the Future, Woven Through Action and Collaboration" as the theme for District 2750.

A "gift for the future" is not about money or material things. It is about nurturing people, strengthening the bonds between individuals, and passing on our shared spirit of service to the next generation.

To achieve this, each of us must take action. Yet it is collaboration that transforms individual actions into something far greater. By sharing ideas, supporting one another, and working together, I firmly believe that every service project can grow into an even greater contribution to our communities.

One of my goals this year is to make our District one team.

This does not mean making all 98 clubs the same.

Our District is not a corporation.

Unlike a company where instructions flow from the top down, Rotary thrives because every club enjoys its own autonomy and carries out distinctive service projects that reflect the needs of its community.

Every club has its own history, culture, and local character. These differences are not weaknesses—they are among District 2750's greatest assets.

I believe Rotary is so appealing precisely because every club has its own unique identity.

Different communities face different challenges, and each club has its own strengths based on the diversity of its members. These differences enable us to learn from one another, inspire new ideas, and broaden the impact of our service.

The role of the District is not to lead every club in exactly the same way. Rather, it is to stand alongside each club, support its unique initiatives, and provide the information, resources, and connections that help it flourish.

To do so, our District organization must also move beyond organizational silos. Our committees should share information, combine their expertise, and work across committee boundaries to strengthen collaboration throughout the District.

Respecting the individuality of every club while supporting one another as one District team—that is the kind of District leadership I hope to achieve this year.

August is Membership and New Club Development Month.

Membership growth is not simply about increasing our numbers. It is about welcoming new friends, expanding the number of people who embrace Rotary's ideals, and extending the reach of our service.

Membership retention is equally important. It means deepening the bonds among members and creating clubs where every Rotarian can genuinely say, "I'm glad to be a member of this club."

I know each club is pursuing its own membership plan based on its strategic priorities. This year, I encourage you to continue exploring opportunities that best fit your club and community, including new membership models, open meetings, and the formation of new clubs or satellite clubs.

There is no single formula for successful membership growth.

Because every club has its own history and community, each must find the approach that works best for its circumstances. That is why the District will continue to work alongside every club—sharing information, promoting successful practices, and exploring new ideas together.

People are naturally drawn to vibrant and attractive clubs.

As our membership grows, fresh ideas emerge, our service becomes even more meaningful, and our contribution to our communities grows stronger.

Welcoming new members while deepening the fellowship we share—

That, too, is an important step in weaving a lasting gift for the future.

By honoring the unique character of each of our 98 clubs while working together as one team—sharing ideas, supporting one another, and strengthening our collaboration—I look forward to building a Rotary year that creates a lasting impact for the future with all of you.
